WEATHER CAUSES TROUBLE.

Samplers, Mills and Smelters Up
Against Frozen Ore.

The continued cold weather is making all kinds of trouble for the producers of ore and concentrates in which the percentage of moisture is heavy, and with them the sampling mills and smelters are sharing it. Fine ores and concentrates freeze into solid masses in cars after loading if that condition does not prevail previously. When the cars reach the samplers it is necessary to use pick and gad to loosen up the mass and, in the case of concentrates it frequently happens that blasting has to be resorted to.

Concentrates that have been shipped from the Buckhorn property, at Ophir, during the last few days came out of camp with the thermometer at 24 degrees below zero, and it was with difficulty that the teamsters could unload their wagons into the cars. Material that reaches the smelters under similar conditions is causing all kinds of trouble at the samplers there, and in some instances the greatest kind of difficulty is reported as being hard to keep the ores and concentrates in the smelter bins from freezing up solid.

For just about a month there has been hardly a day and never a night that it has not frozen quite hard and, unless a moderation in the weather comes soon, concentrating and sampling mills will have a hard time to keep things moving.—Salt Lake Herald.

Best and Belcher Mill Starts.

The Best and Belcher mill is running on an accumulation of ore from the Chollar croppings amounting to about 1000 tons. It is thought this batch of ore will be completed in a few days, when the mill will start on ore to be brought here from Tonopah, arrangements for which were completed some time ago.—Chronicle.

Things in the United States Senate and House of Representatives are coming to such a pass that members not yet proven of graft stand as objects of wonder to their fellow statesmen and the country at large.—Seattle Times.

It is very much to be hoped that the suspect under arrest at Caldwell will prove to be the cowardly assassin of ex-Governor Sternberg. If he is proven to be guilty short work should be made of him. And in any event Idaho cannot afford to relax her vigilance until after the murder of Sternberg has been punished.

The Jolly Girls Extravaganza company is billed here for next week.
